Faith

Overview

If there was one thing I would share about management & leadership...

It would be about faith. This is about how you look at management and leadership and if you are willing to stick to it even in hard times. It's about your source and where you derive your point of view and drive. What does your heart tell you this means?

"Faith in oneself is the best and safest course."

Michelangelo

For the week...

- Reflect: Look back at your management and leadership journey. What would you say about your peaks and valleys? What kept you going and why?
- Act: Does your team have faith in what they can do? Do they understand what they are capable of? If you do not know, ask them. If needed, fill in their gaps.
- And like many things in life, start small: begin your day with some type of thought or action that lifts and connects your spirit with what is possible in the day.

Let's be real, this can be a tripping point in a conversation. And yet, we all have a spiritual place and point of view. Of a power greater than ourselves. We think, move and act based on our belief system. We all believe in something. Will we have the faith to see it through? Will others see it shine through us?
